

of which are "two rings." The legal tender clause is inserted inside of these rings.

We read in the Chicago Tribune of Tuesday:

The marked feature in financial matters to-day is with most of the discount bank rates is the scarcity of currency, and consequently the abundance of exchange. Several of them were quoting rates among themselves at par, and others at 14 & 15%. The smaller amounts changing hands, however, were buying at 14 & 15%. The city is comparatively bare of it. Silver, buying 6 & 8%; selling 20 & 12%. Demand Treasury notes, of course, 6 & 6% premium. New, buying 4% selling at premium.

The City Journal of Tuesday says—

The money market was quiet, with a fall of 10 per cent. with a demand for paper in excess of the offerings. Gold was higher, closing at 14 premium buying, and 16 premium selling. Silver was also better, dealers at close paying 8 premium and selling at 10. Premiums are now at 14 & 15%. The small amounts were sold at 14 & 15%. In some cases bankers' checks were sold at one-tenth discount.
